

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

Mortgages of personal property.

A bill in relation to recording mortgages of personal property, which had been passed to be engrossed by the Senate, was referred in course to the committee on the Judiciary.

Eastern Railroad Co.

A bill in addition to an act to authorize the Eastern Railroad Company to construct a freight track and take lands for freight purposes in Charlestown, and for other purposes, introduced on leave in the Senate and referred to the committee on Railways, came down for concurrence.

The Speaker called the attention of the House to the bill, with reference to the application of the 46th rule of the House thereto. He stated that it was clearly a bill affecting the rights of the railroad corporation named therein. It made no difference whether it affected the rights of the corporation favorably or unfavorably; whether it conferred or took away rights. In either case, it was within the terms of the rule, as affecting the rights of a private corporation; and, if leave to introduce the bill had originally been asked in the House, the Chair had no doubt that it would be his duty to rule it out under the 46th rule. But the bill had first been introduced on leave in the Senate, and now came down for concurrence.

Before deciding whether it was excluded under such circumstances by the 46th rule of the House, the Chair would be glad to hear the opinions of members of the committee who reported the code of House rules, and of other members, upon the question.

Several members spoke upon the bill and the application of the 46th rule thereto. The Speaker then said, that as no question of order had been distinctly raised for the ruling of the Chair he was glad to be relieved from ruling thereon, and would put the question to the House on concurring with the Senate in granting leave to introduce the bill, and would regard the decision of the House on that question as indicative of its judgment whether the Chair should receive or exclude in the future, under the 46th rule, bills of a like character under the same circumstances. But before putting the question he would, with the indulgence of the House, state more fully the reasons which induced him to bring this question distinctly to its attention.

In the first place, if the House permitted the introduction of this bill in concurrence with the Senate, it was evident that a bill, which it had been the duty of the Chair to rule out under the 46th rule of the House, might be taken to the Senate, there introduced on leave, and when it came down for concurrence, the Chair would be obliged to put the question to the House of concurring in the introduction of the same bill which had once been excluded by the Chair in obedience to the House rule. The Chair was informed that precisely this course had been taken in regard to another bill ruled out a day or two since. The Speaker did not think he ought to put the House or its presiding officer in such a position, without first distinctly calling the attention of the House to the fact, and asking its direction.

In another aspect, it was a question of importance whether matters should be introduced by bill on leave, or should come in by petition or order of inquiry. By the 99th rule of the House, Cushing's Manual was made an authority, supplementing its own specific code. Cushing says, § 321, a committee "can only consider the matter referred to it; and, consequently, is not at liberty, like the assembly itself, to change the subject under consideration by means of an amendment." If, therefore, a matter comes to a committee by bill introduced on leave, the committee cannot widen the scope of the bill. It is restricted to the bill before it. Such, doubtless, was not the intention in the present case, but a railroad corporation might cause a bill to be introduced going just as far and no farther than the corporation was willing to run the risk of going, and the committee could not travel outside of the range of its provisions. On the other hand, if the matter came to the committee by petition or order of inquiry, the committee could frame and report such a bill as its judgment approved, being only restricted to the subject-matter set forth in the petition or order. It was not, therefore, a mere matter of form, but one of substantial importance, whether the House should allow subjects of legislation to be introduced in the one way or the other.

The question was then put on concurring with the Senate in granting leave to introduce the bill, and the House refused to concur.

advertising.

The report of the joint committee on Printing on the statement of expenses of committee advertising, which had been recommitted by the House to the joint committee on Printing, with instructions to report a bill or joint rule regulating such advertising, came down non-concurred in the reference, and referred to the committee on Joint Rules and Orders. The House concurred in the latter reference.

Hampshire Probate Court.

The Speaker announced that he had received a communication from the justices of the supreme judicial court, transmitting their opinion on the question, "Under the constitution of this Commonwealth, can a woman be a member of a school committee?" submitted to them by order of the House. The opinion is as follows:—

Women as school committees—opinion of the supreme judicial court.

The justices of the supreme judicial court respectfully submit the following answer to the question upon which their opinion was required by the order of the honorable House of Representatives, of the sixteenth day of the present month.

The question is stated in these words: "Under the constitution of this Commonwealth, can a woman be a member of a school committee?" The question is limited to the effect of the constitution upon the capacity of a woman to hold this office, and involves no interpretation of statutes.

If the constitution prevents a woman from being a member of a school committee, it must be by force of some express provision thereof, or else by necessary implication, arising either from the nature of the office itself, or from the law of Massachusetts as existing when the constitution was adopted, and in the light of which it must be read.

But the constitution contains nothing relating to school committees; the office is created and regulated by statute; and the constitution confers upon the general court full power and authority to name and settle annually or provide by fixed laws for naming and settling all civil officers within the Commonwealth, the election and constitution of whom are not in the constitution otherwise provided for.

The common law of England, which was our law upon the subject, permitted a woman to fill any local office of an administrative character, the duties attached to which were such that a woman was competent to perform them.

The duties of a school committee relate exclusively to the education of children and youth in the town or city for which it is elected; they consist of the general charge and superintendence of the schools, including the employment of teachers, the selection of school-books, the regulation of the attendance of scholars and the preparation of school registers and returns; and they are in no respect of such a nature that they cannot be well and efficiently performed by woman. The necessary conclusion is that there is nothing in the constitution of the Commonwealth to prevent a woman from being a member of a school committee, and that the question proposed must be respectfully answered in the affirmative.

A message was received from the Senate, transmitting a communication from His Excellency the Governor, an- Charles Sumner.

nouncing the death of the Hon. Charles Sumner, senior Senator of Massachusetts in the congress of the United States, as follows:—

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, BOSTON, March 12, 1874.

Gentlemen of the Senate and of the House of Representatives:

It becomes my painful duty to announce to you the death of our senior member in the United States Senate. Yesterday afternoon, at ten minutes before three o'clock, in his own rooms at Washington, at the age of sixty-three years, CHARLES SUMNER departed this life.

Eighteen years ago he was struck down at his place in the vanguard of freedom, and from that terrible wound, nigh unto death, he never fully recovered, though he struggled against its effects with all the forces of his nature, and was aided by the best efforts of medical science. But he had regained such a measure of health and strength, that of late his intimate friends and associates were encouraged to hope he might be spared to us for some years longer. The shock of his death comes upon us suddenly, and when least expected. The last enemy of man has finally triumphed, and our great orator, scholar, statesman, philanthropist,—the champion of universal freedom and the equal rights of man,—after a life of labor and usefulness, has fallen under the burden of disease long and heroically borne.

Of him, as much as of any man of his time, it may be said, that he lived not for himself or his kindred. A special representative of this State, his Commonwealth was the whole country. For years one of the most prominent and influential citizens of the United States, he was recognized by the civilized world as one of the foremost advocates of struggling humanity. Thus acknowledged at home and abroad, his death will be deeply and sincerely mourned, not alone by his State and this nation, but by every people and country reaching out for a higher and freer life.

Twenty-three years ago this spring he was elected to the United States Senate, and at the time of his death he was the senior member of that body in length of consecutive service. His devotion to the duties of his place was an example worthy of general commendation. He rarely allowed personal considerations of any kind to interfere with his public obligations. Had he not been blessed with an iron constitution he must long ago have succumbed to the weight of his labors. Devoted to many phases of one comprehensive cause, the advancement of man; throwing himself with great energy and power into whatever work he undertook,—it was given him to see a noble triumph of that for which he aspired and wrought. Thousands and thousands of men and women find the way of life easier and brighter because of him, and in almost every town and village of the country, there will be praises of honor to his name.

During his long period of service some mistakes he doubtless made, for despite his great learning and intellectual grasp he somewhat lacked the every-day wisdom frequently given to those much his inferiors. But this was in no sense to his discredit as a man. His aims were high, his purposes were pure. His voice was that of an honest man, his endeavors were those of an upright statesman. His moral integrity stands out as a sublime figure in these later years. While the atmosphere around him was foul with corruption, no stain of suspicion ever fell upon him. However other public servants prostituted their positions for selfish ends, we all felt sure that CHARLES SUMNER would not be smirched by any disclosures or investigations. This single fact alone is enough to crown him with glory.

Gentlemen, you must have unspeakable satisfaction at this hour in your recent action on the matter relative to the army register and national battle-flags. It was communicated to Mr. Sumner while he was in the full possession of all his faculties, and we may well believe that he rejoiced in this vindication by the constituents whom he had so long and so faithfully served. I thank you for giving me the pleasure of transmitting to him, by the hands of one whom he honored, a representative of those for whom he had so heroically struggled, this fresh token of the regard in which he was held by the people of this Commonwealth.

It was his desire, often expressed, that he might fall, when fall he must, while at the post of duty. His wishes in this respect were gratified. The day before his death he was at the Senate Chamber attending to official business as our agent and servant; and one of his last utterances, when in the very arms of death, was, to an intimate friend, to take care of the civil rights bill, the passage of which he had much at heart. Thus he went out from among us, with his last moment of consciousness still pleading, as he so often and so eloquently plead through many years of vigorous manhood, for the down-trodden and oppressed.

The great Senator has fallen, and we shall see him no more on earth. Being dead he yet speaketh—by the hopes he inspired, the works he accomplished and the recollection of his virtues. In a few days his mortal remains will be laid away in the grave. Be it ours to guard most tenderly the memory he hath left to us, and approve ourselves the fit constituents of CHARLES SUMNER.

W. B. WASHBURN.

Charles Sumner, senior senator of Massachusetts in the congress of the United States, be referred to a special committee of five members of the Senate, with such members as may be appointed by the House of Representatives, with instructions to consider and report what measures it may be expedient and proper to adopt as a recognition of the important services of the late distinguished senator, and a public acknowledgment of the grateful esteem in which his memory and character are held by the people of this Commonwealth.

Resolutions on the Death of Charles Sumner.

Charles Sumner.

Mr. Phillips of Salem, chairman of the committee on the part of the House appointed for that purpose, reported the following resolutions :

Resolved, That the legislature of Massachusetts receives the sad intelligence communicated by his excellency the governor, of the sudden death of the Honorable Charles Sumner, senior senator of Massachusetts, in the congress of the United States, with emotions of profound and abiding grief.

Resolved, That in this sudden calamity, Massachusetts mourns the loss of an inestimable public servant, whose separate qualities are sometimes found in individual citizens, but rarely united in one man. His industry was tireless, and his fidelity unlimited. In the prosecution of those great measures, to which he gave his support, his energy, constancy and courage were unconquerable. In his contests for the supremacy of the principles upon which he had staked the hazard of his life, he was unmoved by assault and insensible to fear. Against the allurements of power and of corruption in every form, he stood a tower of adamant. At every crisis in public affairs his bearing was that of one, who, confident as to his own duty, was considerate of the rights of others. His extraordinary acquisitions as a scholar made him eminent among able men in every department of learning. He was an accomplished legist and jurist, and as an orator unsurpassed by any man of his time. The vigor of his intellect, his great experience and capacity, his philanthropic spirit, his ardent patriotism, his irrepressible love of liberty, his limitless devotion to the rights of man, gave to all classes of the people, to all sections of the country, and to the world at large, a permanent interest in the prolongation of his labors and his life.

Resolved, That deploring the public loss, it is yet a consolation that the people of the Commonwealth share in the triumphs, resulting, in great part, from the labors of their illustrious senator, to which, in the agony of death, he gave his last and noblest thoughts, and which culminated in the destruction of an odious and sectional system of chattel slavery ; in the enfranchisement of four million slaves ; in their political and social elevation,—and the incorporation of the sublime doctrines of the Declaration of American Independence into the text and body of the Constitution of the Republic.

Resolved, That in the galaxy of her illustrious children, whose colonial, revolutionary, constitutional and military services, shed an undying lustre upon her name, Massachusetts has no worthier son.

Mr. Phillips moved the adoption of the resolutions, which were supported also by Messrs. Codman of Boston, Sanger of Danvers, Smith of Cambridge, Hale of Boston, Fitzgerald of Boston, and Palmer of Boston.

The resolutions were unanimously passed by a rising vote.

Joint Assembly.

Joint assembly
for election of United States senator.

At twelve o'clock the Senate came in, and the two branches went into joint assembly, the President of the Senate in the chair.

The journals of the two houses were then read, so far as they related to the vote for a United States Senator, the names of the members of the House voting for the several candidates being omitted, on motion of Mr. Sanford of Taunton.

The president of the convention then announced that neither branch had chosen any person to the vacancy in the United States Senate caused by the death of the Hon. Charles Sumner, and that, pursuant to a law of Congress, the two houses had met in joint assembly, and the roll would now be called, each member being requested to announce his choice orally.

Mr. Mayhew of Tisbury asked to be excused from voting, on the ground that he had paired with an absent member.

Mr. Codman of Boston rose to a point of order, that the joint assembly could not excuse a member from voting, the law requiring every member to vote, and that a motion to excuse a member from voting was not in order.

The Chair ruled that the point was not well taken, from which ruling Mr. Codman appealed.

The decision of the chair was sustained, and the joint assembly then voted that Mr. Mayhew of Tisbury be not excused from voting.

The roll was then called, and the following named members voted

The bill to authorize the town of Beverly to issue bonds for the purpose of funding its debt, was further considered. The amendment proposed by Mr. Kimball of Boston was rejected, and the bill was passed to be engrossed and sent up for concurrence.

Bills :

To authorize cemetery corporations to hold funds in trust for the care of lots ; and

In addition to an act to provide for the attendance of constables at sessions of the municipal court of the city of Boston ;

Were severally read, passed to be engrossed and sent up for concurrence.

Bills :

Relating to the county law library associations ;

In addition to an act concerning witnesses in criminal prosecutions in other states ; and

To authorize the trustees of the House of the Angel Guardian to hold additional estate ;

Were severally read and passed to be engrossed in concurrence.

The bill to amend chapters 262 and 279 of the acts of 1873, relating to truancy and school attendance, was read and considered.

Mr. Adams of Quincy raised the point of order, that, Point of order. under the 47th rule of the House, it was not competent for the committee on Education to report this bill ; that the first section of the bill covered the same ground as a petition on which leave to withdraw had been reported by the committee on the Judiciary, the report having been accepted by the House. The petition referred to was that of the school committee of the city of Cambridge for an amendment of chapter 262 of the acts of 1873, so as to authorize truant officers to make arrests and serve civil processes in the performance of their duty, and the report of the committee on the Judiciary was accepted March 20, 1874.

The Speaker ruled, that it was obvious upon a comparison of the petition and the first section of the bill, that the subject-matter, or (to use the language of the 47th rule) the "measure" contemplated by both was "substantially the same." The acceptance by the House of the report of the committee on the Judiciary (leave to withdraw) on the petition, must be considered as a final rejection of the petition and of the measure contemplated by it. The rule provides that, after such rejection, "no measure substantially the same shall be introduced by any committee or member during the same session." The committee on Education had, therefore (inadvertently, no doubt), infringed upon the rule by reporting the first section of the bill. Objection was not taken on this ground to the other sections; but it was not in the province of the Chair to amend or revise a report of a committee, and if any part was open to valid objection as against order, the whole must be excluded. The Chair must, therefore, rule that the bill was not properly before the House, but had no doubt that if the committee reporting the bill would consent to striking out the first section, no objection would be made to considering the rest of the bill upon its merits.

Mr. Adams of Quincy assented to this suggestion, but, on motion of Mr. Field of Leominster, the bill was, without objection, recommitted to the committee on Education.

At 4.25, the House adjourned.

The bill to amend chapter 249 of the acts of 1870, concerning the fisheries of Buzzard's Bay was read.

Point of order.

Mr. Howes of Dennis, raised the point of order, that it was not competent for the committee on the Fisheries to report this bill on the petition referred to them.

After remarks by several gentlemen, the Chair ruled that the point was well taken, for the reasons following :—

The petition referred to the committee, and on which the bill is reported, prays that the provisions of chapter 60 of the acts of 1811, entitled an act further regulating the taking of fish in Mattapoisett River, may be extended to certain waters specified in the petition. The bill extends to said waters the provisions of a different act, being chapter 249 of the acts of 1870, entitled an act for the protection the fisheries in the headwaters of Buzzard's Bay. If the provisions of the acts of 1811 and 1870 were substantially the same, perhaps no objection would lie against the bill reported. But a comparison of the two acts shows that they are substantially different. The act of 1811 is designed for the special protection of alewives ; the act of 1870 embraces all kinds of fish. The latter act prohibits various methods of taking fish not forbidden by the former. The provisions of the act of 1870 cover the entire year ; those of the act of 1811 only three months of the year.

Upon well settled rules governing the powers of legislative committees, it was clearly incompetent for the committee on the Fisheries to report a bill extending the provisions of a different act, passed more than half a century later and containing substantially different provisions from those of the act which the petitioners prayed to have extended.

On motion of Mr. Savery of Wareham, the bill was recommitted to the committee on the Fisheries.

The bill to establish the salaries of certain judges and registers of probate and insolvency, was read and considered.

Mr. Savage of Taunton moved to amend, so that the salary of the register for Bristol County should be $1,800 instead of $1,600.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, BOSTON, April 30, 1874.

Gentlemen of the Senate and House of Representatives :

I am advised that the Legislature has duly elected me a Senator in the Congress of the United States to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Charles Sumner. This trust came to me so suddenly and so unexpectedly that I have been at no little loss to know what my duty in the premises might be. Were I to decide the question solely on personal grounds, I should continue in the position I now occupy. I feel most deeply the great responsibilities of the Senatorial office—exceptionally great in the present instance, because of the standing and character of him whom I succeed. I know full well that I have already received at the hands of my fellow-citizens higher honors than I merit, and I am profoundly conscious that other men would discharge this new duty with more than my ability. But the situation compels me to a wider view of the issue and a decision on other than selfish considerations. I therefore resign the office of Governor and accept that which you have conferred upon me. I shall assume the obligations thereof with a determination to let no personal interest stand in the way of the interests of the people who have given me this further pledge of their regard. To you, as their immediate representatives, I beg to present my grateful thanks. In the sphere of honorable activity and responsibility to which you have called me, it will be my ambition to so bear myself that neither you nor the Commonwealth may regret your action.

(Signed) W. B. WASHBURN.

The Speaker thereupon declared that the House of Representatives took notice that William B. Washburn, late Governor of the Commonwealth, had resigned that office, and that the duties, powers and authorities appertaining to the office of Governor had thereby devolved upon His Honor Thomas Talbot, Lieutenant-Governor, and the House would govern itself accordingly.

The resolve in favor of the town of New Marlborough was read, passed to be engrossed and sent up for concurrence.

Bills :

To amend chapter 81 of the acts of 1826, relative to the trustees of the New England Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church ; and

To legalize certain acts of the Central Square Baptist Society of East Boston, and for other purposes ;

Were severally read and passed to be engrossed in concurrence.

The bill in relation to proxy voting by officers of corporations was rejected, in accordance with the report of the committee on the Judiciary.

The motion of Mr. Knox of Lawrence, to reconsider the vote whereby the House passed to be engrossed the bill to secure a more equal apportionment of the state and county taxes upon the several cities and towns, was carried.

On motion of Mr. Kimball of Boston, the votes whereby the several amendments proposed by Mr. Murray of Pittsfield were adopted yesterday, were reconsidered, and the amendments were rejected.

Mr. Murray then moved to amend by striking out "one-third" in the third section of the bill, and inserting instead "one-twentieth."

Mr. Wilson of Boston objected that the amendment was not in order, the House having refused to strike out the clause which it was proposed to amend.

The Speaker ruled that the point was well taken. The House had just rejected an amendment to strike out the clause, "including polls at one-third of a mill each," and by refusing to strike it out, had agreed to it in that precise form, and it was not in order at the same stage of the bill to afterwards amend it by changing one-third to one-twentieth. (Cushing's Manual, §§ 98, 99.) Under rule 35 of the last House, the amendment would be in order. That rule provided, that a motion to strike out being lost, should not preclude amendment. But the rule of the present House (rule 89) does not save the right to amend when a simple motion to strike out has been made and rejected.

Mr. Codman of Boston then moved that all rules which precluded the motion of the gentleman from Pittsfield be suspended.

The Chair ruled that it was not competent for the House, upon motion, to suspend the principles of general parliamentary law. Even if the House suspended rule 99, which adopts for certain purposes Cushing's Manual, the general parliamentary rule would still remain in force ; that to refuse to strike out a part of a bill was to agree to it in that precise form, and that the part so agreed to could not afterwards, at the same stage, be amended. The House could not suspend this general rule any more than it could the general rule requiring a majority of votes to pass a bill.

The bill was then again passed to be engrossed.

The report of the committee on Just and Equal Taxation, inexpedient to legislate on the order as to the expediency of amending the laws relative to the taxation of mortgaged property, and sundry petitions in relation to the same subject, was considered.

The bill to provide for the temporary relief of the poor, was read.

Point of order.

Mr. Shaw of Boston raised the point of order, that the bill was not properly before the House, it not being competent for the committee to report such a bill.

The Chair sustained the objection. The bill which came from the Senate, and was referred to the committee on the Judiciary, was a bill "to authorize the city of Boston to appropriate money for the temporary relief of the poor." Its provisions applied only to that city. The committee had reported, in a new draft, a bill "to provide for temporary relief of the poor," applicable to all cities and towns in the Commonwealth. A committee could not thus change a special to a general bill. They must keep within the scope of the subject-matter referred to them.

The bill was accordingly laid aside.

Orders of the day.

The report of the committee on the Judiciary, reference to the next General Court, on the bill to amend the General Statutes relative to the descent and distribution of real and personal property, was further considered. The question of referring the bill as amended (House Doc., No. 432) to the next General Court was negatived by a vote of 42 to 43.

Mr. Hale of Boston raised the point of order that a quorum was not present. A count of the House was had, showing that 118 members were present, and that the point was not well taken.

Point of order.

The same gentleman then raised the point of order that a quorum not having voted, a second division of the House should be had, and called for such division.

The Chair ruled that a second division could not be claimed as of right. The Constitution provides (Art. 21 of Amendments) that "not less than 100 members of the House of Representatives shall constitute a quorum for doing business." This is to be understood as requiring the attendance or presence, when business is transacted, of at least 100 members. It is not necessary to the valid decision of a question that 100 members actually vote, if the requisite number are present. In point of fact, a majority of questions are decided with few or no viva voce responses, and without division or count. Rule 62 requires every member to vote, unless excluded by interest or excused. Any member may require the observance of the rule by other members while the voting is proceeding and before the vote is declared. But if a quorum of the House is ascertained to have been present when a vote was taken, the decision is valid, and a member cannot, as a right, after the declaration of the vote, call for a second division and count, simply because it appears that less than 100 members voted. It is to be presumed that the members not voting concur with the majority of those who do vote. If, upon division of the House, it appears that a quorum have not voted, a member may, as of right, require the fact to be determined whether a quorum is present, and that has already been done in the present case.

Mr. Mason of Plymouth then called for the enforcement of the 62d rule, requiring members to vote.

The Chair ruled that it was too late to call for the enforcement of the rule after the vote had been completed and declared.

On motion of Mr. Loring of Fitchburg, the bill was then indefinitely postponed.

On motion of Mr. Bishop of Newton, the consideration of the bill to amend an act to incorporate the Boston Safe Deposit Company, was postponed till to-morrow, and sundry amendments, moved by the same gentleman, were ordered to be printed.

On motion Mr. Olney of Boston, the report of the committee on the Judiciary, inexpedient to legislate on the order as to the expediency of authorizing parties whose lands or estates have been taken for the laying out, widening or alteration of streets, to apply for a jury at any time within one year after their lands are actually entered upon, was amended by substituting therefor a bill in relation to damages sustained by the laying out or altering of highways and other ways. The bill was read and ordered to a second reading.

On motion of Mr. Adams of Quincy, the consideration of the bill to establish a State Detective Force, was postponed until Wednesday afternoon and placed in the orders for that day, and sundry amendments moved by Mr. Jones of Boston and Fiske of Needham, were ordered to be printed.

On motion of Mr. Johnson of Lowell, the consideration of the report of the committee on Railways, leave to withdraw on the petition of Edward Crane et als., to be incorporated as the Boston and Albany Railway Trust Company, was postponed until to-morrow, and a bill moved by the same gentleman as a substitute for the report, was ordered to be printed.

Mr. Loring of Fitchburg raised the point of order, that it was not competent for the House to reconsider the vote by which the House had once refused to pass the bill over the Executive veto. Point of order.

After remarks by several gentlemen, the Speaker ruled as follows :—

The question of order raised is apparently not without difficulties. No precedents have been cited, and the Chair has had no opportunity to search for authorities.

The constitution provides (chapter I., section I., article 2) that when a bill is returned with the objections of the Executive, the branch first receiving it "shall proceed to reconsider the said bill," and if, "after such reconsideration," it is passed by the requisite two-thirds vote, it shall be sent, with the objections, to the other branch,

"where it shall also be reconsidered, and, if approved by two-thirds of the members present, shall have the force of a law."

By the rules of the House (Nos. 68 and 69), "When a vote has passed, * * * * it shall be in order for any member to move the reconsideration thereof on the same or the succeeding day"; but no "question shall be twice reconsidered."

The point of the objection of the gentleman from Fitchburg (Mr. Loring) is, that there has already been one reconsideration in accordance with the provisions of the constitution, and that the motion of the gentleman from Boston (Mr. Crocker) proposes a second reconsideration, which is forbidden by rule 69.

The constitution, whenever it prescribes a mode of legislative procedure, must be regarded as the higher law; and if there is a conflict between the constitution and the rules of the House, the latter must give way. It is better, however, so to construe the constitution and the rules, that full effect may be given to both. The Chair believes this may be done in the present case.

There is a clear distinction to be made between a bill and a question on the bill. A bill may remain the same through all its stages, but the question changes with each stage. The same distinction is to be taken between a bill and a vote on the bill. A vote is a categorical answer to a parliamentary question, and there will be as many different votes on a bill as there are different questions arising on the bill.

A corresponding distinction is to be observed between the reconsideration of a bill and the reconsideration of a question or vote on the bill. By observing this distinction, the constitution and the rules are harmonized. The reconsideration which the constitution calls for, is the reconsideration of the bill itself,—the reasons why it should or should not pass. It is the sober afterthought of the House upon the merits of the measure which the bill contains, in the light of the Executive objections. The reconsideration which the rules intend and provide for, is the reconsideration of a question or vote arising on the bill, with the limitation that the same question or vote should not be twice reconsidered.

But, by the rules, each of the questions or votes to which a bill gives rise, may be reconsidered once. Is, then, the question which the pending motion proposes to reconsider, the same question as that which arose (before the veto) on the passage of the bill to be enacted? The Chair thinks it is not. The question then was, substantially, Shall this bill become a law with the approval of the Executive? The question which it is proposed to reconsider is, Shall this bill become a law notwithstanding the objections of the Executive? It requires a two-thirds vote to pass the bill in the latter case, and only a majority vote in the former. The difference between these two questions, technically and in substance is, at least, as great as the difference between the questions arising at any two stages of the bill. The veto of a bill is to be regarded as giving to the bill an additional and exceptional stage, having its peculiar question and vote, which are subject to reconsideration under the rules of the House like any other question and vote.

If the term "reconsideration" were to be understood as having the same application in the constitution as in the rules of the House, and if the question of the passage of the bill after the veto were to be regarded as the same question as that of its passage before the veto,—it must follow that, if the House had once reconsidered the passage of the bill before the veto, it could not again reconsider the bill, in obedience to the constitution, after the veto, without violating its own rules. Such a construction ought clearly to be avoided. In the sense of the constitution, the bill is reconsidered at each of its successive readings or stages, and the question or vote arising at each stage may, in the sense of the rules, be also reconsidered.

A reasonable liberty of action is rather to be enlarged than narrowed, in the construction and application of rules, by the Chair. To guard against haste, or surprise, or the accidental disadvantage of the minority at the moment a vote is taken, the rules intend to secure the right of once reconsidering every vote. This right is especially to be protected on a question like the present, where one negative vote is equivalent to two affirmative votes, and where the parliamentary minority is often a large numerical majority.

It is suggested by the gentleman from Fitchburg (Mr. Loring), that serious embarrassments may arise from allowing the reconsideration of the vote upon a vetoed bill; that, in the present case, if the House had passed the bill over the veto, the state constabulary force would apparently have been abolished; that the force would be reinstated by the reversal of the vote upon reconsideration; that, by a suspension of the rules, such reconsideration might be had after the lapse of days or weeks, or a second reconsideration might be carried; and that difficult questions would arise in regard to the status of the constabulary force in the interim.

Similar difficulties may be suggested in regard to the reconsideration of votes on other questions. So far as they exist, they are inseparable from the right to reconsider at all. It would be sufficient for our present purpose, to say that the House has not passed the bill over the veto, but has refused to pass it; and that in no case of such refusal, could any such embarrassments arise.

But if the bill had been passed over the veto, the answer might be, that the decision of the House is always to be regarded as in abeyance, and its action as not final, until the right of reconsideration under its rules has expired or been exhausted; that it requires the same vote (two-thirds) to suspend the rules that it does to pass a vetoed bill, and it is extremely improbable that such a vote could be obtained to suspend the rules for the purpose of defeating the bill by reconsideration, after the bill had once passed, and the right to reconsider had expired; and that, upon the final passage of the bill by the House, whether upon the first vote or upon reconsideration within the time limited by the rules, the bill itself would pass immediately out of the possession and control of the House into the custody of another branch or department of the government, so that no further action could be had on it even by suspension of the rules. It would be much easier to repeal the act under such circumstances, than to attempt to reconsider its passage.

To return to the precise question that is now raised, the Chair rules that it is competent for the House to reconsider a vote refusing to pass a bill over the Executive veto, and that the pending motion is in order.

No appeal being taken from the ruling of the Chair, the question was put on the motion to reconsider, which prevailed.

A motion by Mr. Knox of Lawrence that the bill lie on the table was lost.

The question recurring on passing the bill notwithstanding the objections of the Executive, and the yeas and nays being called, the House refused to pass the bill, two-thirds of the members present and voting not having voted in the affirmative.

The yeas and nays were as follows :—

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Veto Message.

A message was received from His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor, returning, with his objections thereto, the "bill to establish a state detective force." State detectives.

The message, which was as follows, was read:—

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, BOSTON, JUNE 19, 1874.

To the House of Representatives:

In returning to the Senate without my approval, on the second instant, the act "To enable the Governor of the Commonwealth to preserve the Public Peace and enforce the Laws," I pointed out what seemed to me certain serious objections of a secondary character. The bill originating in the House of Representatives, entitled "An Act to establish a State Detective Force," obviates some of the objections then noted, in that it makes provision for closing up the business now in the hands of the state police, for the disposition of property seized and held by that force under legal process, and for the care and custody of records and other property of the Commonwealth in the possession of the constabulary. It also explicitly recognizes the necessity of a trained police force, independent of local influences and restraints, subordinate only to a central and responsible head, subject to the control of the Executive, and clothed with authority to preserve the peace and execute the laws in all parts of the Commonwealth.

So many of its provisions substantially accord with my own views, that I have earnestly sought to approve the bill "To establish a State Detective Force." But, on very careful consideration, it fails to commend itself to my judgment, nor can I gather that it meets the sanction of the great body of our thoughtful and law-abiding citizens. It therefore becomes my duty to return it to your honorable body without executive sanction. In so doing, I deem it unnecessary to repeat the reasons, given in my recent message to the Senate, for thinking some form of state police a valuable and highly important coördinate of the Executive. The measure before me virtually acknowledges the pertinency and soundness of those opinions, and I shall but briefly indicate the reasons why I am compelled to refrain from giving it my signature.

It repeals the act of 1871 establishing the large and well-organized state police force, and provides in its place for the appointment of thirty-one officers, to be called state detectives. The scope of the bill is to give these officers duties of a twofold character: first, they are to have and exercise all the common law and statutory powers of constables, except the service of civil process, and also all the powers given to police or watchmen by the statutes of the Commonwealth; and, second, they are to aid the attorney-general, district attorneys, and magistrates, in procuring evidence for the detection of crime, and in the pursuit of criminals.

While these two kinds of duty are, of necessity, sometimes imposed upon the same officers, it has been found essential in the practical working of all police organizations, substantially to separate them, and give to one part of the force all those duties primarily related to the preservation of the peace and the protection of society from what the laws broadly designate as minor offences, and to another part the more delicate and responsible duty of tracking graver criminals and obtaining evidence necessary to establish artfully planned crime. For whichever duty the Executive might wish to employ the state detective force, the number authorized by this bill seems to be an unfortunate one. For detective service only it is larger than it need be. Though the more open and gross forms of crime, such as the local police and constabulary commonly deal with, are painfully frequent among us, fortunately the more cunning and skilfully concealed forms are still so infrequent that the Commonwealth does not require the service of as many special detectives as this bill provides. But if, in the discretion allowed the Governor and Council, a smaller number be appointed, this agency would then be of little or no avail for the preservation of the peace. And if the force created by the act is to labor in both the fields of duty contemplated by the second section, the whole number authorized would be quite too few for such efficient service as the people have a right to demand and expect.

When the state constabulary was established by the act of nine years ago, a force of thirty-four men was authorized, and the experience of every Executive since then proves that this number was insufficient for the required duty. The service necessary at any one of the large gatherings in our rural neighborhoods during the holiday season, often demands the presence of as large a body of officers as this bill provides, and it frequently happens that a considerable number are simultaneously called for from several different points in the State. It would be utterly impossible to meet the urgent wishes of the people in this regard with the force that might be appointed under the present bill. To be sure, the tenth section provides that it shall be the duty of the local police and constabulary to aid the detective force in the discharge of their duties whenever seasonably notified and called upon for that purpose; but as no power is given to enforce this duty, nor any penalty provided in case such aid should be refused, the section cannot be relied upon as furnishing a means through which the state force may be strengthened or rendered more efficient.

I am not aware that there is any general demand for the abolition of the present state police on the part of my fellow-citizens who respect the laws upon our statute books and wish to see them enforced. So far as their voice reaches me it is for the elevation and improvement of the force. That there may be inefficient or corrupt men in it, while a thing to be deplored and rectified as fast as possible, is no more than can be said of every police in the civilized world. Because many kinds of vice flaunt unblushingly and unpunished in our large cities, and officers are occasionally found derelict or corrupt, would it be considered wise to abolish municipal police altogether, and trust the safety and security of these communities to the old-fashioned constabulary, annually elected at the ballot-box? Because we cannot enforce our criminal laws with omniscient impartiality against all offenders, shall we cease to enforce them as best we can with the agencies at our command?

Organization, system, independence of popular control as far as possible, and numbers sufficient to insure respect and command order, are the recognized necessities of modern police, whether local or state. Conscious and conscientious responsibility in the head of the department, and vigilant but considerate watchfulness on the part of the citizens, will give us the best attainable police. I believe the present state force is steadily improving in faithfulness, integrity and efficiency. I am satisfied that it is the determination of the commissioners and the chief to rid it as rapidly as possible of corrupt and inefficient members, and to seek by its aid a uniform and consistent enforcement of all laws and a faithful discharge of all duties intrusted to and imposed upon it. So far as lies in the power of the Executive, I stand pledged to this course, both by my oath of office and by the convictions of my deliberate judgment.

The provision in the act under consideration for the disposition of property seized and now held by the state police, seems to me open to a somewhat serious objection. By the terms of section thirteen, all such property is to be delivered to the respective sheriffs of the counties in which it was seized, and they or their deputies are to complete all proceedings in relation thereto. Changes of this sort pending any civil process are to be deplored. If, however, they unavoidably occur, would it not be better to transfer the property in question to hands as closely allied and as nearly in sympathy with the original authority as possible? In my judgment, the claims of the law to this property would stand a better chance to be actively and efficiently promoted by its delivery to the force representing the same general, systematic, disinterested power, free from all local influences and complications, as that by which process against it was begun.

Because, therefore, I think this latter provision likely to result in serious detriment to the State in cases where prosecution of offences against the laws has already commenced; because I believe there is little demand for the abolition of the state police, except from a class whose interests and occupations are, through its agency, brought into a position of conflict with the laws; but chiefly because I believe that the number of officers proposed to be substituted for the present constabulary will be wholly inadequate for the service which it is both the prerogative and the duty of the Executive to render, and because by reason of such inadequacy the safety and peace of all good citizens will be endangered, I withhold my approval of this bill and return it to the House for further consideration.

THOMAS TALBOT.

The question being put, "Shall the bill pass notwithstanding the objections of His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor?" and the roll being called, the House refused to pass the bill, two-thirds not voting in the affirmative.

Veto Message.

The bill regulating the sale of spirituous or intoxicating liquor, which had passed to be enacted by both branches, was returned by His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor, with his objections thereto, which were as follows :—

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, BOSTON, June 27, 1874.

To the House of Representatives :

GENTLEMEN :—No more important question can be presented to us in the discharge of our official duties than that concerning the traffic in spirituous liquors. The results involved in any decision that may be made are so momentous, and the consequences so grave and wide-reaching, that in discussing the issue we ought to lay aside personal and party considerations of every kind and be influenced solely by the obligations we owe to our fellow-men and the solemn trusts we have taken upon ourselves in behalf of the Commonwealth. Called upon to consider the "Bill regulating the sale of spirituous or intoxicating liquor," I must act on my oath and my conscience, appealing for my justification, not alone to the enlightened judgment of the people of Massachusetts, but to that Power which is superior to all human authority and infallibly tries the hearts of men.

If we admit that there may be a use of intoxicating liquors so guarded and temperate that no appreciable evil arises therefrom, it is still the unanimous verdict of the civilized world, supported by a weight of evidence not to be overthrown, that the use of alcoholic fluids is the cause of much the largest proportion of the crime and degradation and misery falling to the lot of man. Among good citizens there is no essential disagreement on the point that the traffic in such fluids must be restrained and limited as far as possible. Difference of opinion arises only when we consider whether it is best to try to regulate the sale of these fluids or prohibit it altogether. If we adopt the latter course we are at least in harmony with the methods adopted by general consent toward other offences against public morals,—offences which we must confess exist to a great extent among us in spite of our efforts to prevent them, and yet upon which the law, so far as its precept goes, stamps the seal of prohibition.

The history of the struggle with the evils of intemperance is most instructive. The earliest attempts to check the use of intoxicating liquors were in the direction of license and regulation. These attempts continued in this Commonwealth for more than two hundred years, with a constantly increasing stringency, which can only be explained on the ground that mild measures were found to be insufficient, until, in 1855, the experiment was determined upon of adopting entire prohibition as the only logical and effective method of dealing with the matter. Without asserting that this has proved so successful in overcoming the evils it was meant to remedy, as was hoped by those who initiated and those who sustain the prohibitory policy, I am fully of the opinion that more progress has been made toward the desired end than was ever before made in the same period under any other system.

In considering what has been accomplished, we must recognize the great changes that have taken place since this system was inaugurated. Our rural districts have undergone a gradual depopulation, and large numbers of our young men have become massed in cities, away from the restraints of home; we have been subjected to the demoralizing influences inseparable from civil war long continued; and the necessity or pressure of business has forced us into a feverishness or restlessness of life that rapidly wears and wastes. Exactly what the effect upon public morals would have been, had the sale of intoxicating liquors, especially in our cities, been free and open under color of law during the past sixteen or eighteen years, no one can assume with positiveness to declare; but I am quite confident that no Commonwealth in which the license system has prevailed can point to nobler records of achievement in material interests, intellectual pursuits, or moral reforms, and equally certain that we could not have made greater progress in any good direction under a law promotive of the traffic in intoxicating liquors.

So far as attempts have been made to compromise the two systems of prohibition and license, by legalizing sales through druggists and town agents, or by permitting the unrestricted sale of malt liquors and light intoxicants, the results have been unsatisfactory. Abuses of the grossest character were found to creep in at once where any privileges were granted, and subsequent legislatures have been obliged to repeal what seemed to be on the passage most carefully guarded enactments of a restrictive character. Compromise in this regard that shall not be abused in the most flagrant manner, all experience with which I am familiar proves to be an impossibility. If intemperance is not our inexorable doom, if the poverty and wretchedness and crime brought on by the use of intoxicating liquors are not our inevitable heritage, what can we do better than to set ourselves in unyielding opposition to the traffic which promotes them!

I am aware that it is said intemperance increases under our prohibitory law,—that the sale of intoxicants is as great as it would be under a license law; but I call your attention to the absence here of the flaunting and attractive bar-rooms that spread their snares to capture the thoughtless and easily tempted in cities where licenses prevail; to the constantly growing sense of disfavor with which the liquor traffic is regarded by the community generally; and to the powerful, systematic and unrelenting activity of those interested in it to break down the law and the officers who try to enforce it. Here is evidence that the statute does impose an effective and crippling restraint, from which relief is sought in the elastic and easily evaded provisions of license. Even if some sincere friends of temperance prefer a stringent license law to a prohibitory system, there can be no denial that the men who have money and business at stake in this contest, are the most ardent and urgent advocates of license, and I cannot doubt that they understand themselves and calculate shrewdly the advantage they will gain.

It is easy to mistake the clamor of interested parties for the voice of the people. When I seek to ascertain what the latter really is, I recall that the license law elaborated with so much care in 1868 was permitted to remain on the statute books only till the people could next be heard at the ballot-box. With the single exception that public bars are prohibited, the measure now under consideration is in no essential point better, and in some respects I think it less stringent than that was. The notorious evasions of that law, and the open way in which all intoxicants were then sold under the protection of innholder's and victualler's licenses, demonstrated the powerlessness of such enactments to protect the community against the evils of intemperance. And the pending bill seems to me simply a prohibitory measure, with exceptions that totally destroy its moral force as an instrument for the promotion of temperance and the well-being of our people.

It is objected to our present liquor law that the enforcement of it is irregular and unequal. Admitting this to be true for the sake of argument, what assurance have we that a license law would be more thoroughly enforced? Are the penalties imposed any more severe? Are there any greater incentives to officers or citizens to do their duty? The prohibitory legislation of 1855 had its origin in the deep-settled conviction that the license law of that period was virtually a dead-letter. The law of 1868 was violated with such open and reckless impunity that it became a mockery in the eyes of the people. In our sister States where the license system now prevails there is a daily burden of complaint that its penalties are defied and its provisions evaded on every hand. Where is the proof that the local police and magistrates who refrain from efforts to enforce the prohibitory law would faithfully and energetically and persistently enforce a license law? It is not furnished by our experience, nor by the experience of any other Commonwealth.

Nor is the argument at all conclusive to my mind, that we should not retain upon our statute books a law that is in advance of public opinion on this subject. Law is, in one sense, a guide-board, pointing out the course of conduct which, if followed, will secure the greatest degree of good and happiness and safety for all. Therefore, it must often be largely ideal in its character, and, frequently, in advance of the general conduct of those subject to it, that it may be an instructor and elevator, as well as a source of restriction and punishment. To a law committing the Commonwealth of Massachusetts to a public acknowledgment that the sale of intoxicating liquors as a beverage is necessary and desirable, I cannot, on my conscience, give assent. It seems to me that the only safe and sound position for a Christian community to take in regard to this matter is that of absolute and unqualified opposition to the traffic.

When I think of the victims to the use of intoxicating liquors in every village of the Commonwealth; when I study the great field over which our board of state charities has supervision; when I consider our almshouses and hospitals and homes for the fallen and friendless ; when I look into our jails and workhouses and houses of correction and the state prison ; and when I try to compute the loss and charges upon all our industries, by reason of imperfect labor, and the taxes for the support of these institutions for reformation and punishment, my judgment unqualifiedly condemns, and my heart and my manhood rebel against, any system that would permit the great source of all this wrong and misery and crime to exist by authority of the Commonwealth. My convictions against the policy of such a system are too strong ; my desire for the welfare and progress of the people is too ardent, and my official responsibilities are too solemn and resistless, for me to hesitate in doing the duty laid upon me. I therefore return the bill entitled, "an act regulating the sale of spirituous or intoxicating liquor," to the House of Representatives, in which it originated, without executive sanction.

Resolved, That the House of Representatives regards the faithful, able and impartial performance of the important and delicate functions of his office by the Honorable John E. Sanford, the Speaker of the House, as eminently worthy of cordial recognition by the House.

Resolved, That the House of Representatives does accordingly heartily thank the Speaker for the very courteous, dignified and acceptable manner in which he has discharged his high and difficult duty.

After remarks by Messrs. Adams of Quincy, Mason of Plymouth, Palmer of Boston, Tyler of Lowell, Parker of Methuen and Bishop of Newton, the resolutions were unanimously passed by a rising vote.

The Speaker resumed the chair and spoke as follows :—

Gentlemen of the House of Representatives :

These words of parting remind us that our duties are drawing to a close. We welcome gladly a release from long and wearisome service. There comes, too, a feeling of regret that the personal relations which we have here sustained—so intimate and pleasant—are about to be dissolved.

As I review the days spent here together, I am conscious of a debt of gratitude which words cannot repay. For the confidence which, on the first day of the session, assigned this place to me by all of your votes, for the like expression of your approval in the resolution just adopted, and not less for the unfailing kindness and courtesy received day by day from each of you, I can only give you my heartfelt thanks.

You know how delicate are some of the duties of the Chair. The presiding officer of a body like this is often called upon to act and decide without a moment's warning or chance for premeditation. You have given me on every occasion your ready indulgence and support. I am only sure of a constant purpose to act with all fairness and fidelity. If I have failed in my duty or erred toward any of you, I ask your generous judgment and forgetfulness.

Our session, gentlemen, has been a long and eventful one. The death of Mr. Sumner came upon us in the midst of our work, not only as an unspeakable loss, but with the burden of an unexpected duty. Fortunately it was delayed until after one of your number had borne to him the assurance that he still enjoyed the honor and confidence of the legislature, which had so often chosen him to his high office. In the election which ensued, like a mariner surprised by a sudden tempest in an unknown sea, without prepared chart or certain observation, we were driven about for many days in peril of serious damage if not total loss. I judge that the interruptions and diversion of thought incident to the canvass and to the tributes of respect to the memory and fame of the great senator, have prolonged our session nearly or quite a month.

I should perhaps be justified by precedent, if I were to break on this occasion the accustomed silence of the Chair, and to indulge in some of the reflections which a retrospect of the session, with its varying record of success and failure, so abundantly suggests. But on this mid-summer day—a day in the calendar on which the voice of the legislator has not been wont to be heard in these halls—I forego my privilege, and forbear to delay the final hour of prorogation. I only ask to record my judgment that no House of Representatives, within my own observation, has assembled with a better purpose or a larger ability for the prompt discharge of its duties; and that the tedious delays and ultimate failure to solve the problem of utilizing the Hoosac Tunnel are due in part to causes beyond your control, but chiefly to the inherent difficulty which a body constituted like the legislature must always find in dealing with questions of business management and practical detail. Such questions are not within the legitimate province of the law-making power. It never was, and never will be, its appropriate function to solve them.

I must not omit to express my obligations to our accomplished Clerk. A rule of the present House has imposed on the Chair the duty of inspecting the record of each day's proceedings. I have thus had ample opportunity to know how important and manifold are the duties of our recording officer, and how well they have been in fact performed. I am sure you will join me in the hope that future legislatures may enjoy his genial and competent services.

To the Sergeant-at-Arms, whose skill and courtesy are equal to every occasion, and to all of his obliging assistants, I also return our common thanks for their cheerful and constant attentions. Nor will I forget my reverend friend, the Chaplain, who has daily lifted our thoughts heavenward, in words simple, earnest and appropriate, to the Source of all wisdom. Our best wishes attend him as he seeks on foreign shores recreation and health.

We separate with ranks not quite unbroken. Two, to whom places had been assigned with us, did not live to occupy them; and one seat is but freshly vacant. Our honored and lamented associate (Mr. Dickinson of Amherst), among the ripest of our number in years and wisdom, conspicuous as a friend of learning and for high official service in the state and nation, respected and trusted for his firm integrity, was stricken down at his post in the midst of duty. The voice to which we listened at noonday was silent at the going down of the sun. For him it was well. Death could not come to him unseasonably to close an honorable and well-spent life.

Our session, gentlemen, has been one of unusual personal decorum and harmony, and we shall part, all of us, with mutual kindness and respect. I shall carry away a lasting sense of my obligations to each of you. Accept my grateful and cordial parting wish, that the blessings of happiness and prosperity may attend you to your homes, and, whether in public or private station, abide with you always.

Thanks to Clerk.

Mr. Loring of Fitchburg offered the following resolution, which was unanimously passed by a rising vote:—

Resolved, That the thanks of the House be and hereby are tendered to the Clerk, for the courteous and efficient manner in which he has performed all the duties of his office during the present session of the legislature.

Thanks to Sergeant-at-Arms.

Mr. Buffum of Lynn offered the following resolution, which was unanimously passed:—

Resolved, That we offer the acknowledgments of the House to the Sergeant-at-Arms and his several assistants, for the very courteous, able and faithful manner in which they have performed their official duties during the present session of the legislature.

On motion of Mr. Bigelow of Boston, the House took a recess until seven o'clock.

EVENING SESSION.

Thanks to Chaplain.

Mr. Bigelow of Boston offered the following resolution, which was unanimously passed:—

Resolved, That the thanks of the House of Representatives are tendered to Rev. Robert G. Seymour for his very appropriate and satisfactory services as their Chaplain during this session, and the hope is expressed that he may return from his trip abroad with renewed health and vigor.

Papers from the Senate.

Chaplains, &c.

A resolve providing additional compensation for the Chaplains and Assistant Clerks of the Senate and House of Representatives, passed to be engrossed by the Senate, was read and rejected.

Information was received that the Senate had rejected the House bill to authorize the selectmen of Sharon to remove certain remains from a burial ground in said town.

A bill relative to indorsers of promissory notes, passed to be engrossed by the Senate, was read. The rule was suspended requiring the reference of the bill to a committee, and objection being made to its being read a second time, the question was put, "Shall the bill be rejected?" and it was negatived. Under a suspension of the rules, the bill then took its second and third readings, and was passed to be engrossed in concurrence.

Report of a Committee.

Mr. Kimball of Boston, from the committee on Finance, on so much of the Governor's Address as relates to the finances of the Commonwealth, reported a bill in further addition to an act making appropriations to meet certain expenditures authorized the present year, and for other purposes. Under a suspension of the rules, the bill took its several readings, was passed to be engrossed and sent up for concurrence, having been amended on motion of Mr. Kimball of Boston.

The bill was subsequently sent down by the Senate with an amendment, adding an appropriation of three hundred dollars for additional compensation for the Assistant Clerk of that branch.

The House non-concurred in the amendment, and the bill was subsequently again returned by the Senate, which insisted on its amendment.

A motion by Mr. Judd of Lee, that the House reconsider its non-concurrence in the Senate amendment, was lost, and the House insisted on its non-concurrence.

The bill was again returned by the Senate, with a request for a committee of conference, Messrs. Merrill, Verry and Learned being appointed on its part. The House agreed to the request, and Messrs. Blunt of Haverhill, Knox of Lawrence and Howes of Reading, were joined to the committee on its part.

The committee of conference subsequently reported, asking to be discharged from the further consideration of the subject, being unable to agree; which report was accepted in concurrence.

The bill was subsequently returned by the Senate, with the indorsement that that branch adhered to its amendment.

A message was subsequently received from the Senate, asking the return of the bill to that branch, which was agreed to, and the bill was accordingly returned to the Senate.

South Boston flats.

The Speaker appointed, as the committee on the part of the House, under the resolve relating to the South Boston Flats as terminal grounds for railroads, Messrs. Phillips of Salem, Fairbanks of Fall River and Wilson of Boston.

Bills passed.

Engrossed bills :

In addition to an act making appropriations to meet certain expenditures authorized the present year, and for other purposes ;

(Which originated in the House of Representatives;) and

To provide for the management of the Hoosac Tunnel and the Troy and Greenfield Railroad, and for other purposes ;

Relative to indorsers of promissory notes ;

(Which originated in the Senate ;)

Were severally passed to be enacted, signed and sent to the Senate.

Resolve passed.

An engrossed resolve concerning the printing of laws relating to elections (which originated in the House of Representatives), was passed, signed and sent to the Senate.

Prorogation.

Prorogation.

Ordered, In concurrence, that a committee be appointed, to consist of three on the part of the Senate, with such as the House may join, to wait upon His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor, and inform him that the two branches of the legislature have disposed of all the public business that has been referred to them, and to request him to inform them whether any acts or resolves passed by them and submitted to him for his approval, not already reported upon, have received, or are likely to receive, his disapproval, and if so, to indicate the same, and if not, to request him, with the advice and consent of the Council, to prorogue them to the Tuesday next preceding the first Wednesday of January next.

Messrs. Merrill, Hawes and Learned, having been appointed on the part of the Senate, the Speaker joined Messrs. Codman of Boston, Olney of Boston, Blunt of Haverhill, Sprague of Framingham, Wellington of Worcester, Loring of Fitchburg, Billings of Hatfield and Bigelow of Boston, on the part of the House.

Mr. Codman of Boston afterwards reported that the committee had attended to the duty assigned them, and that His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor was pleased to say that he had acted upon all matters that had been laid before him, and that the Secretary of the Commonwealth would communicate, under his direction, to the legislature, what his action had been upon the matters that had been laid before him. He further congratulated the legislature upon the close of their long session, and announced that he would forthwith accede to their wish to be prorogued.

Mr. Hale of Boston then offered the following order:—

Ordered, That a committee of three be appointed to wait on His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor, and say that the previous message of the two Houses was designed, on the part of this House, to request His Honor to prorogue the legislature in case His Honor should have either signed, or returned without his approval to the Houses in which they severally originated, the bills and resolves submitted to him at the present session; and that if His Honor understood the previous message otherwise, this House desires that its request for prorogation may be considered as withdrawn.

The order was rejected.

Mr. Fitzgerald of Boston moved a reconsideration of the vote whereby it was rejected, and called for the yeas and nays, which were ordered. The roll was called, and the motion was lost by a vote of 49 yeas to 51 nays.

Mr. Knox of Lawrence moved that the Sergeant-at-Arms be instructed to conduct the Secretary of the Commonwealth to the House, that he might proceed to prorogue the legislature as directed by His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor, which was carried.

Objection being made that a quorum was not present, and a count of the House being had, it appeared that 101 members were present.

Mr. Fitzgerald of Boston then moved a reconsideration of the vote whereby the motion was carried, and called for the yeas and nays on the question, which were ordered; and the roll being called, the motion to reconsider was lost by a vote of 36 yeas to 65 nays, as follows:—

The Secretary of the Commonwealth, at 3 o'clock and 20 minutes, A. M., came in and stated that His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor desired him to say that of the 409 acts that had been laid before him, all had been signed by him except three, which had been returned to the branches in which they severally originated, with his objections thereto, and that of the 92 resolves that had been laid before him, all had been signed by him except three, which had become laws without his signature, and that it was his pleasure to prorogue the legislature in accordance with their request. And the Secretary of the Commonwealth accordingly declared the General Court prorogued until the Tuesday next preceding the first Wednesday in January next.

PROCEEDINGS IN JOINT CONVENTION

FOR THE ELECTION OF A U. S. SENATOR.

JOINT CONVENTION FOR THE ELECTION OF A UNITED STATES SENATOR.

WEDNESDAY, March 25, 1874.

Pursuant to assignment, the two branches met in Convention,

And the records of the two Houses in the matter of election of a senator in the congress of the United States having been read, it appeared that no election had been made on the part of either House.

The President announced that in conformity to a law of the United States it was the duty of the two branches to proceed to a vote for a senator in the congress of the United States, to fill the vacancy occasioned by the death of Hon. Charles Sumner.

Mr. Mayhew of Tisbury asked to be excused from voting.

The President proceeding to put the question on excusing Mr. Mayhew, Mr. Codman of Boston rose to a point of order, which, being stated, was that the motion should not be entertained, as the law of the United States touching the manner of proceeding in the convention, required that every member present should vote.

The Chair ruled that the point of order was not well taken.

Thereupon, Mr. Codman appealed from the decision of the Chair.

And the question being stated, Shall the decision of the Chair stand as the judgment of the convention? the vote thereon was taken, and it was carried in the affirmative; so the decision of the Chair was sustained.

And the question being taken on excusing Mr. Mayhew from voting, it was carried in the negative.

The roll of the convention was thereupon called, and the members present voted as follows, to wit:—

THE SPEAKER.

1. The Speaker shall take the chair at the hour to which the House stands adjourned, call the members to order, and on the appearance of a quorum proceed to business.

2. He shall preserve decorum and order; may speak to points of order in preference to other members; and shall decide all questions of order, subject to an appeal to the House.

[With regard to appeals, see Rules 81 and 92.]

3. He shall declare all votes, subject to verification as hereinafter provided.

[See Rules 63 to 67.]

4. In all cases he may vote.

5. He shall rise to put a question, or to address the House, but may read sitting.

6. He shall each day examine the journal of the House.

7. He may name a member to perform the duties of the chair for a period not exceeding two days at one time.

8. In case of a vacancy in the office of Speaker, or in case the Speaker or the member named by him in accordance with the preceding rule, is absent at the hour to which the House stands adjourned, the senior monitor present shall call the House to order, and shall preside until a Speaker pro tempore or a Speaker is elected by ballot, which shall be the first business in order.

MONITORS.

9. Two monitors shall be appointed by the Speaker for each division of the House, whose duty it shall be to see to the due observance of the Rules and Orders, and on request of the Speaker to return the number of votes and members in their respective divisions.

10. If a member transgress any of the Rules and Orders after being notified thereof by a monitor, it shall be the duty of such monitor to report the case to the House.

[For duty of monitor in case of the absence of the Speaker, see Rule 8.] [See Rule 20.]

CLERK.

11. The Clerk shall keep the journal of the House. He shall enter therein a record of each day's proceedings and submit it to the Speaker before the hour fixed for the next sitting.

12. Every question of order shall be noted in the journal, and with the decision shall be entered at large in an appendix which shall also contain the Rules and Orders of the House, and of the two branches.

13. The Clerk shall prepare and cause to be printed each day a calendar of matters in order for consideration; followed by a brief minute of the preliminary proceedings of the previous day; a list of matters lying on the table; and such other memoranda as the House or the Speaker may direct.

14. Any objection to the calendar shall be made and disposed of before the House votes to proceed to the consideration of the Orders of the Day.

15. The Clerk shall retain bills and other papers, in reference to which any member has a right to move a reconsideration (except petitions, enacted bills, orders of inquiry and orders of notice), until the right of reconsideration has expired: provided, that the operation of this rule shall be suspended during the last week of the session.

MEMBERS.

16. No member shall stand up, to the inconvenience of others, while a member is speaking; or pass unnecessarily between the Speaker of the House and the member speaking; or stand in the passages, or in the area in front of the chair.

17. No member shall be absent more than two days without leave of the House.

18. No member shall leave the House before the consideration of the Orders of the Day is finished.

19. Papers in possession of a member obtaining leave of absence, or at the end of the session, shall be left by him with the Clerk.

20. If a member is guilty of a breach of any of the Rules and Orders, he may be required by the House on motion to make satisfaction therefor, and, until he has done so, he shall not be allowed to vote or speak, except by way of excuse.

[See Rule 10.]

COMMITTEES.

21. At the beginning of the political year, eleven Standing Committees, to consist of seven members each, shall be appointed, as follows:—

- A Committee on the Judiciary;
- A Committee on Matters of Probate and Chancery;
- A Committee on Finance;
- A Committee on Elections;
- A Committee on Bills in the Third Reading;
- A Committee on Engrossed Bills;
- A Committee on County Estimates;
- A Committee on the Pay Roll;
- A Committee on Leave of Absence;
- A Committee on Public Buildings;
- A Committee on Printing.

22. Unless other provision is made in any case, all committees shall be appointed by the Speaker, and the member first named shall be chairman.

23. In case of the election of a committee by ballot the member having the highest number of votes shall be chairman.

24. No member shall be required to be on more than two committees at the same time, nor chairman of more than one.

25. No member shall serve on any committee in any question where his private right is immediately concerned distinct from the public interest.

26. The Committee on Finance shall report in appropriation bills, only such items of expenditure as are authorized by law, or such as the committee has been directed by the House to insert.

27. The Committee on Bills in the Third Reading shall examine and correct the bills which are referred to it, for the purpose of avoiding repetitions and unconstitutional provisions, insuring accuracy in the text and references, and consistency with the language of existing statutes: provided, that any change in the sense or legal effect shall be reported as an amendment.

28. The Committee on Engrossed Bills shall carefully examine and compare engrossed bills, and report them rightly and truly engrossed, when found to be so.

29. When the object of an application, whether by petition, order, or bill introduced on leave, can be secured without a special act under existing general laws, the committee to which the matter is referred shall report leave to withdraw, inexpedient to legislate, or ought not to pass, as the case may be.

30. No bill affecting the rights of individuals or private or municipal corporations shall be reported by a committee, unless notice has been given to all parties interested, by public advertisement or otherwise, without expense to the Commonwealth; or unless satisfactory evidence is produced that the parties interested have either received notice in writing, or have in writing waived notice.

31. On or before the twenty-second day of March, committees shall make final report upon matters referred to them prior to that day, unless further time is granted, for cause.

Committee of the Whole.

32. When the House determines to go into a committee of the whole, the chairman shall be appointed by the Speaker.

33. The rules of the House shall be observed in a committee of the whole, so far as they may be applicable, except the rules limiting debate. A motion to rise, report progress and ask leave to sit again, shall be always first in order, and be decided without debate.

REGULAR COURSE OF PROCEEDINGS.

Petitions, &c., and Reports of Committees.

34. Petitions, memorials, remonstrances, and papers of a like nature, and reports of committees, shall be presented before the House proceeds to the consideration of the Orders of the Day, and the Speaker shall call on the several divisions for such papers.

35. The member presenting a petition, memorial, or remonstrance, shall indorse his name thereon, with a brief statement of the nature and object of the paper, and the reading thereof shall be dispensed with, unless specially ordered.

Papers from the Senate.

36. Papers from the Senate shall be laid before the House by the Speaker, and received for action conformably to such of these Rules and Orders as are applicable thereto, before the House proceeds to the consideration of the Orders of the Day.

Papers addressed to the House, not Petitions.

37. Papers addressed to the House or the General Court, other than petitions, memorials, and remonstrances, or those received from the Senate, may be presented by the Speaker, or by a member in his place, and shall be read unless it is specially ordered that the reading be dispensed with.

Orders of Inquiry.

38. All motions contemplating legislation, when not founded upon petition, or upon bill proposed to be introduced on leave, shall be made in the form of an order of inquiry, which shall indicate the nature of the legislation proposed; and if reference is made to any particular law, for amendment or otherwise, the order shall specify the chapter and section, as well as the subject to which it relates.

Postponement to the Next Day on Request of a Member.

39. The consideration of any order proposed for adoption, or of any request for leave to introduce a bill, shall be postponed without question to the day after that on which the order is proposed or request made, if any member asks such postponement.

Bills and Resolves.

40. Bills shall be fairly written in a legible hand, without material erasure or interlineation, on not less than one sheet of paper, with suitable margins and spaces between the several sections; dates and numbers being written in words at length.

41. If opposition is made to a bill before it is ordered to a second reading, the question shall be, "Shall this bill be rejected?"

If no opposition is made, or if the question to reject is negatived, the bill shall go to its second reading without a question.

42. Bills involving an expenditure of public money, shall, after the first reading, be referred to the Committee on Finance, for report on their relation to the finances of the Commonwealth.

43. Bills from the Senate, after their first reading, shall be referred to a committee of the House, unless they were reported to the Senate by a joint committee.

44. Amendments, proposed by the Senate and sent back to the House for concurrence, shall be referred to the committee which reported the measure proposed to be amended, unless such committee is composed of members of both branches.

45. No bill shall be proposed or introduced unless received from the Senate, reported by a committee, or moved as an amendment to the report of a committee: provided, that the House may grant special leave to a member to introduce a bill; but when leave is asked for the introduction of a bill, it shall be read for information before the question is put on granting leave; and if leave is granted, it shall be committed, before it is ordered to a second reading.

46. No bill affecting directly the legal rights of individuals or corporations, otherwise than as it affects generally the interests of the whole people of the Commonwealth or of the cities or towns to which it specifically applies, shall be proposed or introduced, by amendment or otherwise, except by a report of a committee, upon petition duly presented and referred.

47. When a bill, order, petition, memorial or remonstrance has been finally rejected, no measure substantially the same shall be introduced by any committee or member during the same session; and if an amendment to a House bill is received from the Senate, which amendment is substantially the same as a bill which has been rejected by the House, the Speaker shall direct the Clerk to indorse on the paper that the House non-concurs in the amendment, and shall not entertain any motion for any other action thereon.

48. Bills in their third reading, shall be referred to the Committee on Bills in the Third Reading, for examination, correction and report.

[See Rule 27.]

49. No bill shall pass to be engrossed without having been read on three several days.

50. Engrossed bills shall be referred to the Committee on Engrossed Bills for examination, comparison, and report.

[See Rule 28.]

51. No engrossed bill shall be amended.

52. Engrossed bills, reported by the Committee on Engrossed Bills to be rightly and truly engrossed, shall be put upon their passage to be enacted; and engrossed resolves, when so reported, shall be put upon their passage; without further reading, unless specially ordered.

53. No engrossed bill shall be sent to the Senate, without notice thereof being given by the Speaker.

Orders of the Day.

54. Bills from the Senate, after their first reading, when not referred to a committee of the House, and bills reported to the House by committees, to which no objection is made or when the question of rejection is negatived, shall be placed in the orders for second reading on the next day.

55. Reports of committees not by bill or resolve shall be placed in the orders of the next day after that on which they are received from the Senate, or made to the House, as the case may be.

56. Bills ordered to a third reading, shall be placed in the orders of the next day, for such reading.

57. After entering upon the consideration of the orders of the day, the House shall proceed with them in regular course, as follows:—Matters not giving rise to a motion or debate shall first be disposed of in the order in which they stand in the calendar; after which the matters that were passed over shall be considered in like order, and disposed of.

58. When the House does not finish the consideration of the Orders of the Day, those which have not been acted upon shall be the orders for the next and each succeeding day until disposed of, and shall be entered in the calendar, without change in their order, to precede matters added under Rules fifty-four, fifty-five and fifty-six. The unfinished business in which the House was engaged at the time of adjournment, shall have the preference in the orders of the next day, after motions to reconsider.

Special Rules affecting the Course of Proceedings.

[For postponement of Order, &c., to next day, on request of a member, see Rule 89.]

59. No matter which has been duly placed in the orders of the day shall be discharged therefrom, or considered out of the regular course.

60. If, under the operation of the previous question or otherwise, an amendment is made at the second or third reading of a bill substantially changing the greater part of such bill, the question shall not be put forthwith on ordering the bill to a third reading or to be engrossed (as the case may be), but the bill, as amended, shall be placed in the orders of the next day after that on which the amendment is made, and shall then be open to further amendment before such question is put. In like manner, when, under the operation of the previous question or otherwise, an amendment is made in any proposition of such a nature as to change its character, as from a bill to an order, or the like, the proposition as amended shall be placed in the orders of the next day after that on which the amendment was made.

VOTING.

61. No member shall vote in any question where his private right is immediately concerned, distinct from the public interest.

62. Every member not prevented by interest, who is present in the House when a question is put, shall give his vote, unless the House, for special reasons, excuse him. Members desiring to be so excused shall make application to that effect before the House is divided, or before the taking of the yeas and nays is begun. Such application may be accompanied by a brief statement of reasons by the member making it, but shall be decided without debate.

63. When a question is put, the sense of the House shall be taken by the voices of the members, and the Speaker shall first announce the vote as it appears to him by the sound.

64. If the Speaker is unable to decide by the sound of the voices, or if his announcement made thereupon is doubted by a member rising in his place for that purpose, the Speaker shall order a return by divisions of the number voting in the affirmative and in the negative, without further debate upon the question.

[For duty of monitors in case of a division, see Rule 9.]

65. When a return by divisions is ordered, the members for or against the question, when called on by the Speaker, shall rise in their places, and stand until they are counted.

66. The sense of the House shall be taken by yeas and nays, whenever required by one-fifth of the members present. When the yeas and nays are taken, the roll of the House shall be called in alphabetical order, and no member shall be allowed to vote who was not on the floor when his name was called or before the roll-call was finished.

67. The call for the yeas and nays shall be decided without debate. If the yeas and nays have been ordered before the question is put, the proceedings under Rules sixty-three, sixty-four and sixty-five shall be omitted; if not, they may be called for in lieu of a return by divisions when the Speaker's announcement is doubted by a member rising in his place, and if then ordered, the proceedings under Rules sixty-four and sixty-five shall be omitted.

Reconsideration.

68. When a vote has passed (except as provided in the next rule), it shall be in order for any member to move the reconsideration thereof on the same or the succeeding day, and such motion, if made on the same day shall (except in the last week of the session) be placed first in the orders of the next day after that on which it is made; but if first moved on such succeeding day, it shall be forthwith considered: provided, however, that a motion to reconsider a vote upon any incidental or subsidiary question, shall not remove the main subject under consideration from before the House, but shall be considered at the time when it is made.

69. When a motion for reconsideration is decided, that decision shall not be reconsidered, and no question shall be twice reconsidered; nor shall any vote be reconsidered upon either of the following motions:

- to adjourn,
- to lay on the table,
- to take from the table; or
- for the previous question.

70. Debate on motions to reconsider shall be limited to thirty minutes, and no member shall occupy more than five minutes.

[For rule requiring the Clerk to retain papers, except, &c., until the right of reconsideration has expired, see Rule 15.]

RULES OF DEBATE.

71. Every member, when about to speak, shall rise and respectfully address the Speaker, shall confine himself to the question under debate and avoid personality; and shall sit down when he has finished. No member shall speak out of his place without leave of the Speaker.

72. When two or more members rise at the same time, the Speaker shall name the member entitled to the floor, preferring one who rises in his place to one who does not.

73. No member shall interrupt another while speaking, except by rising to call to order.

74. No member shall speak more than once to the prevention of those who have not spoken and desire to speak on the same question, nor more than twice on the same question without leave of the House.

Motions.

75. Every motion shall be reduced to writing, if the Speaker so directs.

76. A motion need not be seconded, and may be withdrawn by the mover if no objection is made.

77. A motion to adjourn shall be always first in order; and that motion, and the motions to lay on the table and to take from the table, shall be decided without debate.

[For application to be excused from voting, to be decided without debate, see Rule 62.]

[For call for yeas and nays, to be decided without debate, see Rule 67.]

[For questions of order arising after the previous question is moved, to be decided without debate, except on appeal, see Rule 81.]

78. When a question is before the House, until it is disposed of, the Speaker shall receive no motion that does not relate to the same, except the motion to adjourn, or some other motion that has precedence either by express rule of the House, or because it is privileged in its nature; and he shall receive no motion relating to the same, except:—

to lay on the table,

See Rule 77, above.

for the previous question,

See Rules 79–84, below.

to close the debate at a specified time,

See Rules 83, 84, below.

to postpone to a time certain,

See Rule 85, below.

to commit (or recommit),

See Rule 86, below.

to amend,

See Rules 87-90, below.

to refer to the next General Court, or to postpone indefinitely,

See Rule 91, below.

which several motions shall have precedence in the order in which they are arranged in this rule.

Previous Question.

79. The previous question shall be put in the following form :
"Shall the main question be now put?"—and all debate upon the main question shall be suspended until the previous question is decided.

80. On the previous question, not exceeding ten minutes shall be allowed for debate, and that only to give reasons why the main question should not be put, and no member shall speak more than three minutes.

81. All questions of order arising after a motion is made for the previous question shall be decided without debate, excepting on appeal, and on such appeal no member shall speak more than once without leave of the House.

[See Rule 92.]

82. The adoption of the previous question shall put an end to all debate except as provided in Rule eighty-four, and bring the House to a direct vote upon pending amendments, if any, in their regular order, and then upon the main question.

Motion to Close Debate at a Specified Time.

83. A motion to close the debate at a specified time, shall be put not less than thirty minutes before the time stated.

[See the next rule.]

When the Debate is closed, Ten Minutes allowed, &c.

84. When debate is closed by ordering the previous question, or by a vote to close debate at a specified time, the member in charge of the measure under consideration shall be allowed to speak ten minutes, and may grant to any other member any portion of his time.

Motion to Postpone to a time certain.

85. When a motion is made to postpone to a time certain, and different times are proposed, the question shall first be taken on the most remote time; and the time shall be determined before the question is put on postponement, which may then be rejected if the House see fit.

Motion to Commit.

86. When a motion is made to commit, and different committees are proposed, the question shall be taken in the following order :—

- a standing committee of the House,
- a select committee of the House,
- a joint standing committee,
- a joint select committee ;

and a subject may be recommitted to the same committee, or to another committee at the pleasure of the House.

Motions to Amend.

87. A motion to amend an amendment may be received, but no amendment in the third degree shall be allowed.

88. No motion or proposition, of a subject different from that under consideration, shall be admitted under color of amendment.

89. A question containing two or more propositions, capable of division, shall be divided whenever desired by any member. When a motion to strike out and insert is thus divided, the failure of the motion to strike out shall not preclude amendment ; or, if the motion to strike out prevails, the matter proposed to be inserted shall be open to amendment before the question is taken on inserting it.

90. In filling blanks, the largest sum and longest time shall be put first.

Equivalent for Motion to Postpone Indefinitely.

91. A motion to strike out the enacting clause of a bill shall be equivalent to a motion to postpone indefinitely.

APPEAL.

92. No appeal from the decision of the Speaker shall be entertained, unless it is seconded ; and no other business shall be in order until the question on the appeal has been disposed of.

[See Rule 81.]
